

PRIVATE CLIENT

A HNW businessman was being targeted by a violent fugitive.

Due to the sensitive nature of this task, we have precluded the input of information by which our principal and client may be identified.

TASKING

Our instructions were in respect of an ongoing criminal matter whereby a well-known fugitive was targeting a businessman.

We were tasked with protecting the client and his family members who were the subject of threats of violence, stalking, and harassment.

SOLUTION

We established a residential security team (RST) comprising a personal protection officer (PPO) and a number of close protection operators (CPOs) being deployed in and around the client's residence.

Our team of investigators worked with the client to create an evidence bundle to be used by the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) whilst giving the option to prosecute the perpetrator via a private prosecution.

BENEFITS

1. A massive deterrence

Having an overt security presence comprising large build bodyguards served as a massive deterrence.

2. Fills in the gap where there are cuts to local policing

Cuts to local policing mean that there are less officers available to respond to crime reports. Instructing us guarantees that your case will be prioritised.

3. Option to use a private prosecution

Leveraging a private prosecution is an option available to members of the public which guarantees access to justice even when public bodies have failed to bring a prosecution - or when there's been avoidable delays.

AT A GLANCE

CHALLENGES

- Cuts to local policing
- High-risk tasking
- Involvement of organised crime groups

BENEFITS

- Deterrence
- Access to justice
